

Opioid-Related News and the Courts

Weekly Review

January 6, 2023

Pennsylvania

Bucks eyes \$10M “stabilization unit” on Doylestown Health campus

Bucks County Herald

Recovery efforts will be supported with $200,000 for co-responder programs, $200,000 for drug court probation staff, and $100,000 for grief support groups, among other programs.

Wisconsin

Executive Committee approves variety of funding requests

The Chronotype

In actions, the [Executive Committee of the Barron County Board of Supervisors]:

- Heard that there is a possibility that major opioid retailers, such as CVS, Walgreens and Walmart will settle in the first quarter of 2023. However even if it does occur and the state of Wisconsin approves the settlement, the county administrator is foreseeing it as a long, drawn-out process. When the county finally secures funds from the settlement, [County Administrator Jeff French] said the funds would likely be used to get a drug court back together like the county once had.

